

On this page:

What disability-related health supports are

What disability-related health supports are for

What having disability-related health supports is like

Our guidelines

What disability-related health supports are

We may fund disability-related health supports to help you manage a health condition caused by your disability.

Disability-related health supports can be health equipment, items and services that help you manage or reduce the impact your disability has on your day-to-day life.

This may include funding for:

- someone to provide you with disability-related health supports, like a nurse or a qualified therapist
- expert training for people who support you
- some types of equipment, like continence products, dressings or food products for your Percutaneous Endoscopic Gastrostomy (PEG)
- some types of assistive technology, such as pressure care cushions or a cough assist machine.

What disability-related health supports are for

We'll only fund a disability-related health support if it's an NDIS support that relates to your disability.

The types of disability-related health supports we may fund include supports for:

- dysphagia
- diabetes management
- continence
- wound and pressure care for slow to heal wounds
- respiratory care and planning to help you breathe properly
- nutrition, including meal preparation
- podiatry assessment and foot care
- seizure monitoring and management
- accessing health or mental health services

- specialist services following a recently acquired severe condition
- training for support workers or the people who support you, where appropriate.

The type of services and supports covered by this list may be provided in a range of different ways.

What health supports aren't funded by the NDIS

We can't fund services and supports that you can get through the health system and other community and mainstream supports and services under NDIS laws. For example, services at public or private hospitals, ambulance transport, medicines, child and maternal health services or palliative care.

This includes supports related to health. For example the diagnostic assessment and clinical treatment of health and dental health conditions. This includes ongoing or chronic health conditions.

The Australian health system provides health services to treat illnesses or health conditions.

You should talk to your doctor first if you need help to manage your health or a health condition. Your my NDIS contact can also help you connect with other services and supports.

What having disability-related health supports is like

You can ask for disability-related health supports to be included in your NDIS plan at any time. Your my NDIS contact can help you understand the process.

Tip: How to tell if a support may be a disability-related health support.

A good way to tell if the support you think you may need can be funded by the NDIS is to answer yes to the following:

- Is the support related to your disability?
- Is the support value for money?
- Will the support benefit you and help you to live more independently?
- Should the support be provided by the health system?

How to get disability-related health supports in your NDIS plan

Step 1: Understand what evidence you need to provide us

You need to give us evidence to get disability-related health supports in your plan. This helps us understand the disability-related health supports you need.

The type of evidence we need will depend on what disability-related health support you're asking for. Your NDIS contact can help you understand what evidence you need to provide.

Step 2: Gather your evidence

The best place to start is by talking to your treating healthcare professional or allied health provider. Your health provider will follow our assessment template to give us the information we need if you think you may need an assistive technology disability-related health support.

This includes assessments for nutrition and dysphagia and continence-related assistive technology.

You might also need to get a quote for some supports. We'll let you know if this is the case.

Learn more about how to gather evidence.

Step 3: Provide your evidence so we can make a decision

You can send your evidence to us by:

- sharing it with your NDIS partner to include in your application
- sharing it with your my NDIS contact at your check-in or plan reassessment
- submitting it to through our service hub
- mailing it to us at NDIA, GPO Box 700, Canberra ACT 2601.

We'll let you know if we need more information, and what we need to make a decision. The funding will be included in your NDIS plan if your request is approved.

If your request isn't approved

We'll let you know if we can't include a support in your plan and why.

You can ask for an internal review of our decision if you don't agree with a decision we make about disability-related health supports.

You can ask for a change to your plan at any time if your situation changes and you think you may need more or different disability-related health support.

Learn more about how to tell us about a change of situation.

When you have disability-related health supports in your plan

You can use your funding to get the NDIS supports you need once you have disability-related health support funding in your plan.

The NDIS supports lists will help you understand what can and can't be paid for with NDIS funding so you can use your NDIS funds in the right way.

Your my NDIS contact or support coordinator can also help you use your NDIS funding.

Funding for providers to support you

You may have funding included in your plan for a provider to help you with your disability-related health needs.

For example, your funding may be for a registered nurse who can change a urinary catheter or a support worker to provide a feed safely using your PEG.

Funding for training for people who support you

A support worker, family member or friend may be able to provide some disability-related health support

We may provide funding for a qualified practitioner to train them if someone else can support you with your disability-related health support needs.

For example, a registered nurse can train your support worker, family member or friend to prevent pressure sores and wounds.

The person may be a support worker, family member or friend.

Before they support you they must:

- be trained by an appropriately qualified health professional
- be trained for that task specifically for you
- have experience in that task
- be competent to provide the support.

Our guidelines

Download the disability-related health supports guideline:

- Disability-related health supports (PDF 246.27 KB)

-
- Download the Disability-related health supports guideline docx file - DOCX 102.95 KB

Download the dysphagia supports guideline:

- Dysphagia supports (PDF 179.57 KB)
- Dysphagia supports (DOCX 72.15 KB)

Download the nutrition supports including meal preparation guideline:

- Nutrition supports including meal preparation (PDF 187.55 KB)
- Nutrition supports including meal preparation (DOCX 84 KB)

Download the diabetes management supports guideline:

- Diabetes management supports guideline pdf file (PDF 181.41 KB)
- Diabetes management supports guideline (DOCX 73.29 KB)

Download the continence supports guideline:

- Continence supports (PDF 173.21 KB)
- Continence supports (DOCX 72.36 KB)

Download the wound and pressure care supports guideline:

- Wound and pressure care supports (PDF 174.44 KB)
- Wound and pressure care supports (DOCX 71.81 KB)

Download the podiatry and foot care supports guideline:

- Podiatry and foot care support (PDF 162.73 KB)
- Podiatry and foot care supports (DOCX 69.02 KB)

---

Related information

What are NDIS supports

What is assistive technology

What is supporting evidence

This page current as of 30 June 2026