About the dog guide provider list

We created this list to help you find trusted information about dog guide providers, services, and products.

It provides better access to:

- providers registered with NDIS Quality and Safeguards Commission
- accredited International Guide Dog Federation (IGDF) providers
- professional and qualified staff delivering service consistent with IGDF standards
- clear and accessible dog guide and related product information
- provider-supplied terms and conditions and service agreements

Providers are listed in a random order.

Providers applied to be on the list and were assessed by an evaluation panel. All providers are NDIS registered and meet minimum service requirements to be on the list.

Participants can still choose from any provider. They do not have to select one from this list.

If you have questions, please email marketpathways@ndis.gov.au

Disclaimer

The information on this list is subject to the NDIA disclaimer and is provided for your convenience only.

The NDIA does not endorse any third-party platforms. Links to other internet sites are for your convenience and do not constitute endorsement of material at those sites, or any associated organisation, product or service.

There may be other providers not listed. Some dog guide providers chose not to submit an expression of interest.

You should use different sources, including online reviews, to compare providers before deciding who to work with.

The NDIA does not accept liability for any claims or losses from services provided by third-party platform providers.
