

On this page:

Home modifications explained

Minor home modifications

Complex home modifications

Related or incidental funding

Contracts or service agreements for home modification services

More home modifications information and resources

Contact your local NDIS office

Home modifications explained

Home modifications are custom-built changes to your home to help you access and use areas of your home.

You may need home modifications if you:

- have safety concerns or difficulty moving around your home
- have trouble with personal care, like using your shower
- can't use the rooms you need to use in your home
- have difficulty achieving your goals in your home because of your disability
- need changes to your home so your carers can support you safely.

Home modifications can be minor changes or they can be complex.

As with any building work, there are laws and regulations that need to be adhered to when undertaking home modifications under the Scheme.

View Our Guidelines - Home modifications to find out more.

Minor home modifications

Minor home modifications (MHM) are home modifications that don't change the structural parts of the home or cost no more than $20,000. We will need an assessment from a suitably qualified occupational therapist on what changes to your home you need.

There are 2 categories of minor home modification:

- Category A minor home modifications cost under $10,000
- Category B minor home modifications cost between $10,000 and $20,000, or they involve minor modifications to a bathroom floor.

These are funded using a set NDIS budget based on current market costs in MMM1 locations using the Modified Monash Model (MMM).

For example, widening an internal doorway that isn't holding up other parts of the home is likely to be a category A minor home modification.

Transcript for 'NDIS Minor Home Mods'

Complex home modifications

Complex home modifications (CHM) are changes that may involve a few areas in your home. For example, you might need to combine your bathroom and toilet to give you more room to use a hoist or shower chair.

An experienced and/or qualified home modification assessor (specially qualified occupational therapist) must assess your needs at home and certify the effectiveness of the modification to meet your goals and likely future needs, during planning and on completion of the works.

The NDIA will provide funding for a building construction practitioner to work with the participant and home modification assessor to help with planning the recommended scope of works. They can assist participants with the review and appointment of builders, or other suppliers in consultation with the participant.

The NDIA will provide funding for participants to engage a building works project manager for complex home modifications, particularly where it involves high risk or cost. The building works project manager must be independent of any builders who quote for the job.

The NDIA may also fund an independent building certifier, if required.

View Our Guideline - Home modifications to find out more.

The NDIA has published a Home modifications guide for builders and designers to provide technical information and guidance about the scope of works the NDIA will typically approve with assessments and quotes for home modifications.

Related or incidental funding

In some circumstances, the NDIA may fund reasonable and necessary supports that are related or incidental to home modifications.

For example short term rent if you need to move out of your home during building works.

The NDIA will generally fund standard modifications and fittings.

You may opt to use your own money to contribute to a more expensive finish or fixture that achieves the same or equivalent outcome as the supports in your NDIS plan.

For example, a participant funded for a standard vanity unit may prefer a more expensive finish.

In this example the participant pays any additional cost to have the vanity upgraded to their preferred finish.

Contracts or service agreements for home modification services

Contracts or service agreements are particularly important when getting advice/specifications for a home modification and with the provider(s) you choose to do your home modifications. These agreements can help you if there are disputes or problems during (or after) the process.

When you engage a provider to develop drawings, plans or other documents for your planned home modifications, the provider is likely to ask you to sign a contract or terms and conditions (T&C) document for that work. The contract (or T&C) may include who owns the intellectual property rights (IPR) in the drawings, plans or documents. This may provide rights for you or other people you engage to use the drawings, plans or other documents (known as an intellectual property licence).

The ownership and restrictions on the use of the IPR in the drawings, plans or other documents may impact how you can use those documents, such as limiting your ability to provide these to someone else to use to build your modifications.

Before signing the contract, you should consider if the IPR ownership and use meet your needs.

More information on IPR is on the Who Owns Intellectual Property page of the IP Australia website.

If you need help understanding or negotiating any agreement with a provider, you may consider using the Disability Gateway to find a legal service provider that can help you.

The Australian Competition and Consumer Commission website has resources to help NDIS participants understand these rights. This includes Your consumer rights - A guide for consumers with disability and a publication list of disability resources .

More home modifications information and resources

-
- Our Guideline - Home modifications
 - Would we fund it - Home automation
 - Would we fund it - Moving house
 - Would we fund it - Modifications to a new house build
 - Factsheet - Understand what you need for home modification \(DOCX 69KB\)
 - Assistive technology, home modifications and consumables code guide

You can also visit the Providing home modifications page for more information about:

- Providing home modification assessments
- Minor home modifications assessment template
- Complex home modifications assessment template
- Providing home modifications quotes

Contact your local NDIS office

Do you have a question, request or urgent issue relating to home modifications? You can now email your local NDIA office directly. Find your local office.

This page current as of 9 May 2023