Technology firm Xceptional is creating opportunities for people with Austism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) to participate in work.

Xceptional’s three day IT Assessment Workshop assesses candidates for their natural talents and technical skills through a series of games and activities.

The innovative hiring model allows candidates to take the next step towards their employment goals by connecting with recruitment managers at software development companies and participating in job readiness training.

There are many ways the NDIS can help people with disability pursue their employment goals, visit Finding, keeping and changing jobs to find out more.
