

Posted on:

29 November 2022

Daniel Pavlovic's business website boasts an impressive line-up of international stars rocking his quirky and unique t-shirt designs.

The A-listers donning Daniel's designs include superstar singer-songwriter Neil Finn, comedians Danny Bhoy and Adam Hills, and West Coast footballer Nic Naitanui.

With 49,000 Facebook followers, the young Perth artist and entrepreneur is making a big impression nation-wide.

"I wanted to be a comedian, but my friends said 'Your jokes aren't funny, stick with the art'," Daniel says.

"I did art at school and thought that I could make a career out of it. So, I studied at TAFE."

With his father Ivan by his side, Daniel started his t-shirt business, daniel(ink.), 9 years ago.

He set up his first market at a local Darlington Arts Festival with 30 shirts and 2 designs. Daniel sold out of t-shirts that day and never looked back.

Today, Daniel is personally supported by the National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS), giving him the capability to run his business and live his best life.

Daniel, 29, lives with cerebral palsy. He wears splints on his legs to help him walk, and on his hands to keep his fingers straight.

An NDIS support worker helps Daniel with the physical demands of running the business, like setting up pop-up shops at markets and shopping centres around Perth most weekends.

"I appreciate the support I get through the NDIS to help me with the physical part of the business. It has changed my life," Daniel says.

As the loss of muscle mass in his hands deteriorated recently, Daniel's NDIS supports have become more crucial for supporting him to achieve his goals.

His NDIS-funded wheelchair was recently upgraded to a motorised model, greatly boosting his independence. Daniel also drives his own car, thanks to NDIS-funded modifications.

"All of that support is about Daniel's independence, and unlocking his potential. It's helped him a great deal," Ivan says.

Daniel is a community-minded businessman. He is reaping the rewards of years of hard work and using his own success to help others.

He donates 10% of his profits to disability service provider Ability WA, formerly The Centre for Cerebral Palsy, out of gratitude for the support he received when he was younger.

In May, in collaboration with Ability WA, daniel(ink.) put on a gala event at the Art Gallery of Western Australia, raising $30,000.

"They helped me so much over the years, I wanted to give something back," Daniel says.

Like any business, daniel(ink.) also contributes to the local economy by supporting suppliers, one for screen printing and embroidery, and another for retail labelling.

Each distinctive t-shirt design has a story.

"I doodle a lot. Some of it doesn't make much sense at the time, but every now and again something special comes out and we run with it," Daniel says.

One design, inspired by a visit to a Picasso exhibition, has been chosen for the launch of a pancreatic cancer research foundation.

Through his growing profile, Daniel is having a positive impact on others.

"We get a lot of mail from parents who have just found out that their child has cerebral palsy, saying that Daniel is giving them inspiration in finding their way forward," Daniel's Dad, Ivan, says.

"Parents have brought their children to the markets to meet Daniel, kids with all sorts of challenges to face in their lives. Daniel has inspired a lot of these kids."

Daniel's success in business has given him the confidence to know he can achieve his goal of living independently.

"Starting the business was never about money. It was about learning that I can do things on my own," Daniel says.

"My goal is to live by myself and travel independently, for the business, and also to visit my sister in Melbourne."

---

Related Stories and videos

The NDIS supports Ben to achieve his dreams and live more independently

Ben's vibrant fashion brand blooms with micro-enterprise support

21 March 2021

Double shots all round for Esperance entrepreneur

Devin's coffee delivery business booms

20 December 2020

Scott Tiran is the perfect example of how the NDIS is designed to work.

Plenty of growth in Scott's new business and his social life

18 May 2023

More stories and videos